

How to hang your stained glass art piece. p. 1

For your convenience we have included six feet of clear fish line and a hook. You may use the fish line to hang your stained glass art piece, or you may choose another option of your own. This is the method we use in both the home gallery and store front galleries.

This page describes how to attach the included fish line to your new stained glass.

There will be two wire loops soldered to your glass piece. Thread the line through one of the loops

Feed the two ends of the fish line through the loop making a knot.

Pull the knot tight. You can double knot, if you choose, but it is not necessary.

Next, thread the fish line through the second loop. The fish line should now be threaded through both loops

Now, from the center of the lower part of the fish line triangle bring the fish line up to the knot. You have created a "doubling" of the line. It is from here you will hang your stained glass art piece.

The finished knot

Bring each end of the fish line together and place them in your hand. When you stretch the line it will form a triangle.

Holding the two ends of the fish line and make a loop.

Hanging notes

For very large pieces or if desiring to hang piece in an area or manner different than we have discussed, we are happy to advise.

Do not hang in drywall. Only hang your piece from a secure location. Do not use suction cups to support a hanging window piece.

Fishline . After tying knot, DO NOT "trim" any excess fishline close to the knot itself.

Please note: Hanging you stained glass piece is your responsibility and risk. Stained Glass Artistry assumes NO liability for any damage and/or injury that may occur by any failure associated with the installation and/or hanging of your stained glass art piece.

Hanging Glass - p.2

Hook screwed into window frame

Advantages of doubled fish line:
Strength
Almost invisible